My heart broke at the thought of losing you. The air in my lungs seemed to disappear at the mention of "she's gone". It was like time stood still. Every night I closed my eyes all I could see was you. I guess that's how love works. You never realize how much you love someone until you have to manage to live without them. Auntie for me this day is one that I never wanted to come but I feel like you knew. I feel like you knew one day that I would have to do life without you. 30 years just didn't seem long enough. I feel like it was just the beginning and now it's come to an end. Where did the time go? I wanted more moments with you, I needed more moments with you. I wasn't ready for it to be over so soon. Blood isn't what made us close, it was love that grew from a simple question that my mom asked of you "Will you be her Godmother". But now all I have of you is memories that I can't feel or touch. All I have of you is what you left behind. My heart is broken because you aren't here. My heart is broken because I lost someone who loved me. You showed me that love is all around you, you just have to figure out who really means it and who doesn't. Thank you for showing me that you really meant it. I've never been good at goodbyes and this is one goodbye that my heart just hurts to feel. The bond we shared as godmother and goddaughter is one that I'll always cherish inside my heart. Life with you was a ride I'll never forget and one that I'll truly miss forever. I love you! - Your Goddaughter, Courtney
